If you already know the basics of Photoshop, here are some helpful tips that can save you time, money, and aggravation: * Create a new document. You can modify a single photo or layer, but it's best to start from scratch so that you don't accidentally modify something you want to keep. * Make a backup of your original image before you make any changes. If you think you've gone too far with your image editing, you can always restore your image. * Choose File⇒New (CTRL+N) to create a new document and File⇒Save As (CTRL+S) to save your work as another file. * Apply a good filter to your image before you start editing to avoid unwanted artifacts. (I cover this topic in the preceding section.) * If you use the Edit>Undo command, you can go back to a previous stage of the editing process. * Before you start making any changes, use the History palette to see a list of all the steps in the process. This makes it easy to go back and forth between steps when you need to because it's so easy to go back to previously used steps. * If you need to make a lot of changes, go to the Layers palette to select only those layers that you need to edit and flatten them before beginning to make changes. * If you are working on a raster image, it can be helpful to create a new, grayscale (monochrome) version of your image so that you can see the details of the different layers in the image. You can create a grayscale version by changing the Mode in the Image menu to Grayscale (GRAYSCALE) and then using the Image>Adjustments>Desaturate command. Photoshop is arguably the best way to fix bad color balance in an image, but sometimes you can recover much of the detail lost through poor color balance by doing a mass restoration. Select the paint brush in the Tools palette and then use the following steps to recolor the image: 1. **Click within the image to select it.** 2. **Choose Image** ⇒ **Adjustments** ⇒ **Adjust Lighting and Contrast,** or press the Ctrl+A key to make your selection active. This opens the Adjust Lighting and Contrast dialog box shown in Figure 10-8. You can select which adjustment you want

. Tuesday, January 02, 2012 Wise men say Blogs are the worst thing to happen in the internet but who are they kidding. The internet is all about being connected to everything you want to be connected to. So, why shouldn't everyone be a blogger? Whether you are a blogger, writer, designer or just an average internet user, you cannot avoid the blogosphere. It is what it is now a global tool. After all, what is the internet for if not to help communicate and interact with people all over the world? It is not the main purpose but it is definitely a tool that is here to stay. A lot of people can say they want to be a blogger but can not even get a website done. You can always say you want to but you actually need to step up to the plate. Writing an article isn't that hard. You can just google about the topic and hit google. The problem lies in the fact that a lot of people don't get their articles on the internet. So, if you are reading this blog, you must know you have already considered setting up your own website and maybe writing an article or two. Set your blog up and go. Adding a blog to your website is like adding a comment. All of those people who don't have a blog and yet want a website, they can opt to comment their views on the comments section. And if that doesn't do it for you, then you can always let everyone know your thoughts by writing for a blog. The internet will give anyone who has a computer a platform to be heard. So, why not join the list of those who have a website? It is a platform for anyone to be heard. And the best thing is, there is always a constant demand to have something to say. And you don't have to even pay a traffic fee to have your views entertained. So, if you want to be a blogger, you may as well start it with a blog. If you prefer to keep your blog more private, then go to the comments section and discuss what you have to say. That is the best way to interact with the public and understand what they want to hear. 1 6 . L e t t ( c ) = 1 0 * c * * 2

What's New In Adobe Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.0.2)?

How to make a Pen tool In this tutorial, you'll learn the basics of the Pen tool, which is used to make pen strokes. You'll be learning what a Pen tool does, how to draw a line with the Pen tool, and how to apply the Pen tool. You can begin with the Photoshop Toolbox, and then follow along the tutorial to learn how to work with the Pen tool. Download the full tutorial for this tutorial Step 1 Open Photoshop and open a new document. For the sake of this tutorial, we'll work in a 300-dpi, RGB color image. We'll start by creating a new layer above the image itself. Create a new layer and name it "Line." In Photoshop, you can only fill the foreground color (the color you're working in) with the foreground color, and you cannot fill the background color (the color on the layer that's on top of your image). So you'll need to lock the foreground color and make it black. To do this, select the Layer's Background checkbox and click "OK." Now, you can fill the layer with black, or any color you like. For the sake of this tutorial, fill it with black. Step 2 Now, we'll draw a simple line in Photoshop. To draw a line, first select the Pen tool. You can do this from the Toolbox, or by choosing View > Toolbox. Alternatively, you can click the "Pen" icon from the top menu bar. Select the "Draw a line" option from the options bar. Now, draw a line across the document. Use the Arrow tool to select the line. Step 3 Now, you can select the paintbrush tool and click the "With Brush" button to select the "Line" brush. When you paint with the line brush, the line is drawn in whatever color you paint with. So to change the line's color, click once on the line and select any color that you like. To change the line's color, click on the line, then select the paintbrush tool. Step 4 Next, you can select the Brush tool and click the "Brush"
